FROM THE PRESIDENT

Epiphanies for the common good

On a recent trip to Washington D.C., I made a pilgrimage to the Lincoln Memorial where I re-read Lincoln's second inaugural address: "With malice toward none, with charity for all . . . let us strive . . . to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

Coming out of the most divided period of American history, when "we the people" had literally been at war with each other, Lincoln's words resounded in my soul as I returned to campus. On my desk was a copy of a small book published by our Pinchpenny Press entitled Epiphany by 2016 graduate Armarlie Grier from Rockford, Illinois. In the opening lines, she writes: "I am a Blackfoot-Cherokee-Irish-Black-Native. I was born in the United States." And then asks with a tinge of frustration, "So I'm an American right? Right?" Armarlie writes of having endured the pain of "trying to pass as whatever is being marketed as American," since her personal experience so often suggested that she was not it. While narrating these autobiographical stories she notes: "I had an epiphany – that my experience is an American experience, but one that is little known." Her story needed to be told. I'm glad she did.

This year in cities and on college campuses all across America – including here – students of color and other underrepresented students, along with their allies, have challenged the latest version of "whatever is being marketed as American" by huckstering politicians and their allies. The age-old divide-and-conquer rhetoric has exploited real and deep divisions in our world's body-politic. By contrast, I am proud of student leaders and others on campus who have defied such logic by leading and joining our Difficult Discussions about Difference (3D events) to make sure that epiphanies of awareness about our differences become the rule, not the exception. I am proud of students for resisting anti-immigrant bias to raise money and health kits for Syrian refugees, and the other countless ways they embody "charity for all."

Just blocks from the Lincoln Memorial, the words of Martin Luther King, Jr. etched in stone at his memorial remain prescient: "Make a career of humanity, commit yourself to the noble struggle for equal rights. You will make a better person of yourself, a greater nation of your country and a finer world to live in." To our newly minted 2016 graduates – indeed, to all of us – may these words for the common good be an everlasting epiphany.

About the cover

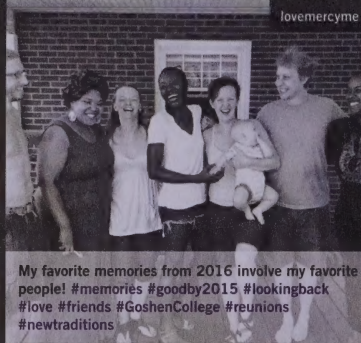

The college's unique Sustainability Leadership Semester at Merry Lea Environmental Learning Center is quite the adventure and transformative learning experience for our students. And similar to Study-Service Term, journaling is one of the central ways students process their daily learnings. In this photo by Brian Yoder Schlabach '07, viewers gain a quick sense of what students take with them for such a hands-on, experiential semester that takes place in a canoe and back at Rieth Village.

TODAY Show's Al Roker stops at Goshen College in world record attempt

Goshen was TODAY Show meteorologist Al Roker's (above) only stop in Indiana as part of "Rokerthon 2" on Nov. 10, in which he set a Guinness World Record for reporting the weather from all 50 states in one week.

A crowd of several hundred students, staff and community members welcomed Roker by the Adolphian Fountain with cheers and signs reading things like "Welcome Al!" and "Goshen – best town under the sun."

After doing the weather report, students in the Goshen College choirs sang an updated version of the "Al-ma Mater," which was re-written with Roker in mind.

Nursing grads have 100 percent success

This year, 100 percent of Goshen College nursing graduates (2016 graduates pictured below at the Nursing Pinning Ceremony) passed the National Council Licensure Exam for Registered Nurses, known as the NCLEX nursing board exam. Goshen College is one of only four colleges or universities in Indiana to score 100 percent on the NCLEX and outperformed schools from all around the nation. The GC passing percentages from this year (100 percent) and last year (95 percent) far outweigh the 2015 national passing rate of 73.44 percent and the 2014 rate of 68.95 percent.

GC working with Harvard Medical School to study mental health disparities in minority communities

Goshen College is partnering with Harvard Medical School and Massachusetts General Hospital for a study on how communities of color access mental health services. As part of a four-year study, Goshen's Center for Intercultural and International Education (CIIE) will work with the Disparities Research Unit at Massachusetts General Hospital to identify key community stakeholders in the Asian-American, Latino and African American communities in California, Colorado, Georgia and Indiana to serve as focus groups in the study.

Once connected, CIIE will conduct focus groups with participants from the communities to better understand the disparities in accessing mental health services, and generate proposals to improve access and reduce mental health disparities in minority communities across the country.

NAIA recognizes 32 GC scholar-athletes

This fall, 32 fall student-athletes were named Daktronics-NAIA Scholar-Athletes, the most ever for the Goshen fall sports teams, passing the previous mark of 30 set last fall. In the previous three-plus years, the Goshen College Athletic Department has been able to boast an impressive 175 scholar-athletes. Athletes must have a 3.5 GPA and be a junior or senior to qualify. The women's soccer team had the most scholar-athletes (14) recognized of any women's soccer program in the nation!

President Brenneman invited to White House for roundtable discussion on climate action

By invitation, President Jim Brenneman (below) took part in a higher education climate roundtable discussion at the White House on Nov. 19, 2015, as part of the American Campuses Act on Climate day of action. There were approximately 50 colleges and universities represented at the event.

On Nov. 12, President Brenneman signed a pledge to continue the college's ongoing efforts to neutralize greenhouse gas emissions and continuing to grow sustainable practices across campus.

"I am proud that Goshen College is recognized as a leader in the field of sustainability by being invited to participate in this important conversation at the highest levels," Brenneman said. "It is an honor for Goshen College to be among a very select group of colleges and universities to be invited by the White House to participate in the American Campuses Act on Climate roundtable."

Five students awarded $18,000 to pursue business ventures

Five student entrepreneurs who pitched their ideas “Shark Tank” style have been granted money to pursue their plans for starting their own businesses. The business department awarded a total sum of $18,000 in entrepreneurship grants.

This year's recipients (above, left to right):

- Mikhail Fernandes '16, an interdisciplinary studies major from Hyderabad, India, will use the grant for an e-commerce website.
- Preston Carr '17, a business major from Saint Thomas, Ontario, will use the grant for a hydroseeding business.
- Madeline Gerig '17, an art major from Goshen, will use the grant for ceramics studio equipment.
- Peter Schrock '16, a mathematics major from Goshen, and Brian Sutter '16, a physics and informatics double major from South Bend, Indiana, will use the grant to begin monetizing websites.

GC named a top college for women

The Women's Choice Award named Goshen College one of “America's Best Colleges” in their 2016-17 guide, number 85 on the list of 1,585 colleges and universities – the top five percent and third in Indiana. According to the Women's Choice Award, the rankings are based on criteria women consider most important with regard to choosing a college or university, including four-year graduation rates, student-faculty ratio and campus safety.

Godspell and Julius Caesar performed

The theater and music departments collaborated to present an updated version of Godspell (left) in Umble Center in November 2015. The 2012 revised version includes contemporary cultural references, noticeably updated from the original 1971 production.

In March 2016, the theater department presented Shakespeare's famous tragedy Julius Caesar (right). For this performance, theater students transformed Goshen College's Umble Center into a "theater in the round," meaning that the audience was seated on all sides of the stage.

GC named "Tree Campus USA" for second year

For the second year, Goshen College was honored with Tree Campus USA® recognition by the Arbor Day Foundation for its commitment to effective urban forest management.

"For Goshen College, being a part of Tree Campus USA demonstrates our commitment to the future of this institution," said Glenn Gilbert, sustainability coordinator and utilities manager at the college. "Planting a tree is a tangible expression of faith, hope and love – faith that tomorrow's campus will be rewarded by today's efforts, hope that the future can and will be a better place, and the love of helping to renew and care for God's creation."

Awards pile high for communication department

The communication department kept its foot to the pedal in 2015, winning major regional, state and national awards for students' work:

- Indiana Radio School of the Year
- Runner up, Indiana Television School of the Year
- The Goshen College Record named Indiana Newspaper of the Year
- 28 Indiana Collegiate Press Association (ICPA) awards
- 22 individual and program awards from the Indiana Association of School Broadcasters (IASB), including 8 first place awards
- Finalists for 13 individual and program awards from the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System (IBS), including Best College Radio Station in the Nation
- Three Michiana ADDY Awards for television
- Six national Broadcast Educators Association awards
- First place Spectrum Award from the Indiana Broadcasters Association (IBA)
- Four awards from College Broadcasters, Inc. (CBI) National Student Radio Production Awards
- FiveCore Media nominated for a regional EMMY Award

SCOREBOARD FALL/WINTER 2015-16

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY (5TH IN CL)

Junior Ryan Smith (Albion, Indiana) earned the highest place (33rd) ever at nationals for a GC cross country runner when he crossed the line in 25:27.0 seconds on Nov. 21 in Charlotte, North Carolina. Smith also broke his own school record with a 25:00.8 clocking at Augustana College in September. Senior Alejandro Rodriguez (Elkhart, Indiana), was 126th at nationals. Both Smith and Rodriguez earned All-Conference honors.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY (10TH IN CL)

Senior Hannah Barg (Galena, Illinois) was the fastest Maple Leaf, finishing in 20:50.13, and ran the fastest time of any team member with a 20:21.3 at the Bethel College Invitational in October.

MEN'S TENNIS (12-2, 7-1 CL)

Head coach Stan King's final season before retirement ended well as the Maple Leafs finished second in the Crossroads League, losing only to eventual champion Marian University in both the regular season and conference tournament. The team set a new school record for victories in a season, eclipsing the mark of 10 set by the 1981 and 1982 squads. King finishes his career with a program-record 105 wins. Senior Aritha Weerasinghe (Colombo, Sri Lanka) led the team with 19 wins, while classmate and All-Conference pick Balazs Pirot racked up 18.

WOMEN'S TENNIS (0-11, 0-8 CL)

First-year Abby Banning (Lenexa, Kansas) and junior Lynnina Noel (Fort Wayne, Indiana) led coach Doug Gossman's team in victories. Goshen entered the season's final day one game out of eighth place, needing a win and some help to force a tie for a Crossroads League tournament spot, but was unable to advance to postseason play.

MEN'S SOCCER (5-13, 4-5 CL)

Goshen fell a game short of .500 in conference play in head coach Arron Patrick's second season, dropping a Crossroads League quarterfinal to eventual league champion Indiana Wesleyan University. First-year Isaac Huerta (Goshen) was named National Offensive Player of the Week by the NAIA on Oct. 6 after scoring three goals in four days, including a pair of game-winning strikes in sudden-death overtime. Huerta led the team with five goals, one more than classmate Nate Nussbaum (Mishawaka, Indiana), and was Goshen's first-team All-Conference pick.

WOMEN'S SOCCER (5-11-2, 1-6-2 CL)

First-year head coach Scott Gloden's tenure started on a high note with four wins in the first six games, including three wins by margins of three or more scores. Junior Melanie Drinkwater (West Sayville, New York) led the team with six goals, while senior Anneliese Baer (Villa Ridge, Missouri) added five scores and three assists. In its final home game of the year, the team raised $915 for breast cancer awareness and research through wearing and auctioning off special pink uniforms.

VOLLEYBALL (16-18, 6-12 CL)

Senior Natalie Hubby (Pettisville, Ohio) and junior Lexa Magnuson (Elkhart, Indiana) earned first-team All-Conference recognition from the Crossroads League coaches: Hubby was second in the league in blocks, while Magnuson led all Crossroads League players with a .310 hitting percentage. Senior Katy Anspach (Winamac, Indiana) earned All-League honorable mention, while first-years Hallie Vanitvelt (Grand Blanc, Michigan) and Whitney Peterson (Monroe, Indiana) received honorable mention and made the All-Freshman team.

MEN'S BASKETBALL (19-13, 10-8 CL)

Head coach Neal Young's third season started with a nine-game win streak and finished with seven wins in a nine-game stretch before a loss in the conference tournament semifinal. Senior Dominique Bolden (Chicago, Illinois) led the team with 15.3 points per game, and was a second-team All-Conference pick and honorable mention All-American. Senior Trevor Commissaris (Traverse City, Michigan) led the team with 7.1 rebounds per game and became the first Goshen post player since 1999 to play in every game of four straight seasons. Commissaris was an honorable-mention All-Conference pick while first-year Austin Hayden (Ossian, Indiana) was named to the Crossroads League All-Newcomer team.

ADVANCING ALL THE WAY TO NATIONALS WOMEN'S BASKETBALL (27-9, 15-3 CL)

When the women's basketball team began their season on October 30, few people would have foreseen it lasting 137 days and ending in the national semifinals. While coach Stephanie Miller's team had finished 18-13 a season earlier, that team fell short of nationals and no GC basketball team, men or women, had won 20 games in a season since 2005.

Of course, basketball games aren't played on paper, and the Maple Leafs had already defied the odds once as they improved from 3-27 to 18-13 in Miller's first four seasons.

The Maple Leafs finished second in the Crossroads League regular-season standings, set new school records for wins in a season and conference wins in a season, and became the first team in any sport to advance to the NAIA Fab Four as they racked up a 27-9 overall mark.

The team earned the No. 18 seed at the NAIA Division II Women's Basketball National Championship, where it edged Concordia University (Nebraska) in the first round on a three-pointer by junior Lynnina Noel (Fort Wayne, Indiana) with seconds remaining. After 18-point wins over No. 6 Saint Xavier University and No. 10 Dakota Wesleyan University, the Maple Leafs fell to eventual national runner-up Southern Oregon University 84-69 in the penultimate game of the tournament.

Three graduating seniors, Jo'Mani Thomas (Fort Wayne, Indiana), Liz Tecca (Kalamazoo, Michigan) and Tyra Carver (Kalamazoo, Michigan), each finished with more than 1,300 career points, which places them fifth, sixth and seventh respectively on the school scoring list. Tecca also holds program records in three-point attempts, field-goal attempts and games played. Carver led the team with 12.4 points per game.

Both of the team's All-Americans, on the other hand, were juniors. Junior point guard Sophia Sears (Paoli, Indiana) was a first-team All-Conference pick (the first from Goshen since 2004) and a second-team All-American, while junior Gabby Williams (Minooka, Illinois) was a second-team All-Conference honoree and third-team All-American. The two players join Margene Murdent, who was a second-team All-American as a senior in 2002, as the only All-Americans in program history.

Miller and fellow coach Katie Gearlds of Marian University, whose team won the conference and national championships, shared Conference Coach of the Year honors in the Crossroads League.

The Sustainability Leadership Semester

BY
JONATHON SCHRAMM

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR OF SUSTAINABILITY
AND ENVIRONMENTAL EDUCATION

JOURNAL EXCERPTS BY A 2015 SLS PARTICIPANT

“I am always taken back to the canoe trip when we stood in the center of the river and it was really hard, then we let the water move us and it was really easy. We need to remember that when thinking about controlling the environment.” (9.21.15)

Water, and the experience of it, forms part of the backbone of Goshen College's Sustainability Leadership Semester (SLS), based at Merry Lea Environmental Learning Center each fall. From the placid waters of Kesling Wetland near the student cottages at Rieth Village, echoing with the calls of frogs and waterfowl, to the swift waters of the St. Joseph River, emptying into the expanse of Lake Michigan, SLS students are never far from water. Working to understand how water interacts with biological and social systems in our landscape becomes a gateway to broader discussions about the connections between humans and the environment of which we are a part. And just as water crosses human boundaries freely, students quickly realize that sustainability challenges require thinking across disciplines and other barriers that often prevent people from working together.

“[The] questions are very helpful in giving me a starting point for interviews... a really important skill that I have yet to master. There are definite dynamics that come into play that I hope this semester and project will start teaching me. Within all the fields I am interested in, I find that being able to relate to people and carefully find information is vital...” (9.14.15)

Headwaters

Students begin this journey with a 10-day orientation to Merry Lea, to life in community (since they live together at Rieth Village) and to the various academic threads that will guide their work (limnology, environmental policy, faith, ethics, sociology and economics) during a period we call Headwaters. This time includes such diverse activities as dipping for wetland invertebrates and reflecting on God's care as seen in the structure of wildflowers, to beginning to analyze complex socio-ecological problems and learning how to cook using herbs gathered from the kitchen garden. Students begin to build bonds with each other, with the faculty and staff in the program, and with the land and its other inhabitants. And they begin to ask some intriguing questions!

"It is interesting to look back into our folklore and see how the idea that deep, dark swamps are bad is still being told in things like fairy tales. How can we change our stories to reflect our new understanding [that wetlands are incredibly valuable both ecologically and socially]?" (9.17.15)

Downstream

After getting a firm grounding in the place they're starting at, the SLS crew moves into a nine-day and 60-mile canoe trip through their watershed, down the Elkhart and eventually St. Joseph Rivers, ending at Lake Michigan (we call this the Downstream Trip). Students have conversations with a wide variety of stakeholders along the way, from a pastor whose church uses the river for baptisms to the sustainability coordinators for the city of South Bend to small business operators and many others, all in the interest of learning how people understand their lives and work in relationship to the natural world around them. This trip offers a firsthand opportunity to learn why the environment is often a thorny area in public policy debates – although we all depend on it, we perceive that dependence in very different ways:

"I really appreciate Dave [Ostergren's, director of the graduate program in environmental education,] answer to this question [of the definition of

About the Sustainability Leadership Semester

The Sustainability Leadership Semester is offered every fall semester at the Merry Lea Environmental Learning Center of Goshen College, a 1,189-acre nature sanctuary (30 minutes southeast of the main campus near Wolf Lake, Indiana). The fully-accredited experience comprises 15 credits over five classes, and is open to upper-level students from any major and from any school. Learn more at: goshen.edu/merrylea environmental policy). I often find problems with the policy process, but it does have its time and place. While I think Dave is a bit gung-ho about it, I appreciate the wrestling we will do." (9.17.15)

SLS participants visit a gravel company in Niles, Michigan in 2015.

This journey is full of great memories and provides many ideas and concepts that continue to come up in conversations across the rest of the semester. And even a week of sleeping in tents is easy when your muscles are tired from full days of canoeing!

Midstream

After the canoe trip, students return to Merry Lea for the heart of the semester at Rieth Village, home of Indiana's first LEED Platinum-certified buildings, where they live, eat and learn together in a "living classroom."

In a semester, students visit more than 60 different sites around the region and speak with as many as 130 different professionals. They are studying in four interrelated content courses and beginning their shared work on an applied project for the capstone course that connects them to nearby community organizations to help those groups develop a variety of projects. The learning community that was built through shared Headwaters and Downstream experiences continues, though, with several faculty present in almost all class sessions, bouncing ideas off each other and the students, and weekly field trips that continue the practice of learning from the broader community. The group grapples with the best strategies for engaging different social groups in sustainability questions:

"On how best to influence others towards sustainability (spend more time explaining "Why" than "What"): "This is something I need to think about more. The 'why' explains to people my values, core to me, so much so that the rest doesn't matter as much. People can relate... because of the shared story in 'why.'" (10.27.15)

And how to envision larger and smaller parts of our society working together on shared solutions in equitable ways:

"The bees (smaller, locally-based organizations) and the trees (larger, centralized institutions) are definitely something I need to incorporate into my thinking. Normally I write off the trees because of their slow movement, but our society has them and we all rely on them so they need to be included in the process... although rarely are they safe spaces. Work with them, not for them." (10.30.15)

Applied Projects

During the final three weeks or so of the semester, students work exclusively with their partner organizations to complete their project work with them, presenting their final work just a few days before the semester ends. Projects in the most recent semester included collaborations with MDC-Goldenrod (a local organization serving adults and children with developmental and intellectual disabilities) to design multiple uses for a farm property that they are planning to develop into a programming site; conversations bringing together Greencroft retirement community residents and business owners to improve environmental quality in south Goshen; and planning with the Goshen Historical Society and the City of Goshen to survey a variety of city residents on their appreciation of and hopes for the Millrace Canal and Trail, a crucial recreational resource in the city. Since the students are working on different projects with different partner groups, this time is still rich with learning as the students talk with each other about their projects, discuss pieces that are going well and those that might not be.

Estuary Days

A final short-but-significant piece of the experience is a three-day Estuary Time, when all of the assignments have been turned in and students have the space to reflect – individually and as a group – on their learning over the semester. The outcomes are as varied as the students themselves, but it is not unusual for new understandings of place and one's role in it to be clarified for many students:

"Defining home has always been a challenge for me... I like to define home as where I feel safe and wanted by the community around me. Intergenerational relationships are also important for a community and key for me to grow and learn." (10.22.15)

Once the journal has been closed for the last time, the last call of Canada geese over the wetland has been heard and the last meal of the semester has been shared together at Rieth Village, another round of the SLS finishes. But the connections that have been forged between people, and between people and places, will long outlast that time, helping graduates of the experience to lead and serve their neighbors in whichever watersheds they call home in the future. 🌿

A spirit of justice

*An interview with state award recipient
Regina Shands Stoltzfus, assistant professor of peace, justice and conflict studies*

BY JODI H. BEYELER '00

In February, the State of Indiana Civil Rights Commission (ICRC) awarded Goshen College Assistant Professor of Peace, Justice and Conflict Studies Regina Shands Stoltzfus the 2016 Spirit of Justice Award, the commission's highest honor. The award was created to recognize Hoosiers who, inspired by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s dream, have devoted their personal and professional efforts to creating social justice in Indiana.

Shands Stoltzfus began teaching at Goshen College in 2002 and teaches courses in race, class and ethnic relations; personal violence and healing; peacemaking; women and gender studies; biblical studies; and transforming conflict and violence. She attended Goshen College and earned a bachelor's degree in English from Cleveland State University in 1988. In 2001, she earned a master's degree in biblical studies from Ashland Theological Seminary and is currently a Ph.D. candidate in theology, ethics and contemporary culture at Chicago Theological Seminary.

Shands Stoltzfus previously served as an associate pastor at Lee Heights Community Church in Cleveland, Ohio, as campus pastor at Goshen College, as minister of urban ministries with Mennonite Mission Network, as staff associate for urban peacemaking with Mennonite Conciliation Service and as director of admissions at Anabaptist Mennonite Biblical Seminary. She is a co-founder of the Damascus Road anti-racism education program, now called Roots of Justice Anti-Oppression program, and regularly leads anti-racism workshops. She serves on the steering committee for the Women in Leadership Project and on the Panel on Sexual Abuse Prevention with Mennonite Church USA. She co-authored the book "Set Free: A Journey Toward Solidarity Against Racism" (Herald Press, 2001).

Q: What did receiving the Spirit of Justice Award mean to you?

A: It was an unexpected surprise. When I first found out about it, I really thought it was a practical joke, but why would somebody joke about that? Part of what makes it a little hard to think about is that I do this social justice work – which at this point of my life is primarily teaching – in the context of lots of other people who are doing it. And so it felt good that it was recognized, but just knowing how many people that I collaborate with, how many people who I draw on, I think this is really the recognition of work that I by no means do in isolation. And once I thought about it in that context, it made it easier to sort of roll with.

Q: Who have been mentors to you in helping to see yourself as a person committed to social justice?

A: I want to talk about my home congregation and my mom. My home church, the Lee Heights Community Church in Cleveland, Ohio, is a church that was started in the late 1950s. It is What books or music would you currently recommend to our readers who want to find strength and new learnings for this journey?

a church that is predominately African-American, but it was a mixed race church. So my youth group from junior high on up through graduating college was this group of black kids, white kids and mixed kids, and that was my normal. And the older I got the more aware I was that this was really, really, really unusual. People just did not do that. But it was my normal. So I lived in that, and we talked about race a lot because it was there. I grew up knowing that there was racism, that racist things happen and we live in this racist context, but somehow in my church community we were fine. We weren't perfect. It wasn't that there were never any struggles, or it was this fantasy utopia, but it was like we go to church together, and we're friends, and we have sleepovers at each other's houses, and it's fine. So as I left that community for college and work, I began to realize what a gift I had been given to have been raised in that context. Race wasn't the only thing we talked about, but because we were people of peace, figuring out how to do that, talking about it and showing up are part of what we do because of our faith commitments. So that was my grounding.

And then there is my mom, who is into the arts, literature, theater. She introduced me to great writers and thinkers, especially African-American writers and thinkers who were writing and thinking about race. And so I just grew up steeped in this tradition of Langston Hughes, other folks from the Harlem Renaissance and the things that they were thinking about and writing about. She was involved in community theater. She got into politics, supporting local council people. She started a publishing company with her friends. So that was just sort of the backdrop of my life. And as I have thought about it, it's like, wow, she really primed the pump well.

Q: How would you describe your students today when it comes to their commitments to work for justice?

A: I teach about things that lots of people don't necessarily want to talk about or learn about, and so I am happy when I have a room full of people that are somewhere on a spectrum of eager to talk about this, wanting to know more, wanting to dive into this and at least willing to have this conversation. So that end of the spectrum where the people maybe aren't so sold on some of the ideas or maybe aren't sure what this conversation is going to be, I've learned not to be afraid of that and feel like I need to be prepared to go to battle or not assume that this is going to be an oppositional relationship. Rather I accept that place and say to students as a whole that you don't have to agree with me. I'm more interested in people who are able to have a conversation with each other. That seems especially important when people don't agree about things, don't have the same experiences or don't have the same ideas. So I love that I do have those passionate activist students, but I also appreciate the opportunity to have students who are different from that and feel like I have something to share with them as well. I mean this so honestly, GC students are so excellent and I feel very happy to not have some of the experiences I read about on higher ed blogs where faculty don't have engaged students.

Q: What do you most hope for students to take away from your classes?

A: Language. When I'm teaching about race or gender and their corresponding systems of oppression, one of the things I want everybody to have is language, to be able to say here's how oppression works, so language about power dynamics and historical context. When you don't know the history, it's just baffling, like, "Why can't people just like each other?" I want them to be able to be people who can talk about things that we don't do a very good job of talking about. We don't talk about race in this country very well because, for generations, many of us were socialized to not notice it, to not talk about it. That's been horrible for us. We can actually talk about race and we're not going to die. Normalizing those conversations and building up that capacity, that's a huge amount of what I do.

Q: There is a lot going on nationally in terms of campus activism. How do you see your students engaging that conversation?

"We don't talk about race in this country very well because, for generations, many of us were socialized to not notice it, to not talk about it. That's been horrible for us. We can actually talk about race and we're not going to die."

A: We are at a moment in history where there is just a lot going on globally and certainly in the country and there is a lot of fodder for activists to grab a hold on. What I am most aware of this academic year is how engaged many of our students have been with lots of that: Black Lives Matter, Title IX, sexual assault, just plain old everyday racism, gender issues. We are in a moment where so many of those things are urgent and someone needs to show up, someone needs to speak. But what all of us need is to figure out that balance of how to sustain the ability to keep showing up over a lifetime of peacemaking. I am really encouraging students – and I tell them I am talking to myself too – that if we really want to be engaged as activist-peacemakers and social justice seekers, we have to equip ourselves to do it for the long haul, because these intense campaigns burn people out.

Q: With all the pain and possible exhaustion, especially as a person of color, how do you remain hopeful and find the energy to continue to face and address injustice?

A: I know that these things feel like they are relentless, like every day there is so much that you hear about or read about. And it is exhausting and it is stressful. You carry those stories around and I think about my kids every time one of these events happens, [in particular] the deaths of unarmed black people in absolutely ordinary situations that any one of us could be in at any time. I think about that. I worry about them. I try not to focus on it. Sometimes it is hard to maintain hope with that reality.

But I show up and I'm still here, so something is propelling this. Probably the biggest part of this is that I have community. [My colleague] community is good, and there is church, but also one of the things I love about the era that we are in is that though there are bad things about social media, for me the good far outweighs the bad. The thing I love about social media is that as a black person in a predominantly white institution and community, I still have daily contact in some way with people of color who are like me. We share information, we commiserate with one another, we celebrate with one another.

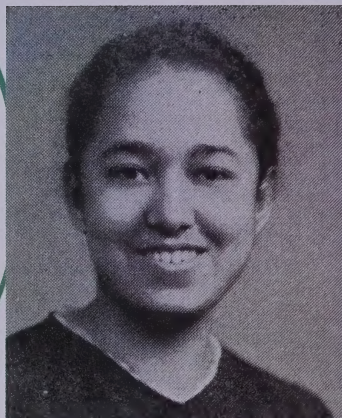

And for me, the current iteration of liberation movements – Blacks Lives Matter – is hopeful. What I've seen in lots of different ways this last year with what's going on at different college campuses and what's happening out on the streets, [is that] people are compelled to keep showing up. And you know, it's a thoughtful showing up. What is happening to our community is not normal, so we are going to interrupt business as usual. And that feels to me to be very Gospel, because people are dying. To know that large numbers of people are not apathetic feels hopeful.

Q: How does your understanding of the Bible connect with your work?

A: I really do love the Bible, but not in a magic wand kind of way. Rather, look at all these flawed, weird people getting it wrong a lot and doing lots of things we don't understand because we're so separated from the culture, language and time period. But we have these stories that are held together by this idea that someone's there rooting for us, and intervenes and gets us and knows that we mess up, but still loves us and is still present.

EDITED BY BRIAN YODER SCHLABACH '07

You wouldn't know it by looking at the tiny radio station tucked away in the upstairs of the Union building or the television studio hidden in the basement of the Good Library, but Goshen College has become a powerhouse when it comes to broadcasting.

Since 2010, Goshen College has been named Indiana Radio School of the Year and Indiana Television School of the year four times each. In 2011 and 2013, 91.1 FM The Globe (WGCS) was named Best College Radio Station in the Nation by the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System, the first college to repeat the title. Each year, dozens of individual and program awards roll in for The Globe and The Correspondent, GC's weekly television news program, as well as FiveCore Media, GC's professional video production company (see p. 7).

But broadcasting students and faculty don't define themselves by these awards. They define themselves by the high-quality content that they produce day in and day out. Students get valuable hands-on experience beginning in their first semester, and develop industry skills that make them ready to be leaders in the field the day they graduate.

From coast to coast, alumni who got their start in those out-of-the-way studios are now making a living as video producers, reporters, sports announcers and radio hosts.

Meet a few of them.

Marvin Lyles '74

Gary, Indiana

Marvin has been in the radio business for 30 years and is CEO of Gospel Sunrise Productions, WVGE 88.7 FM and WLTH 137.0 AM. He was just nominated for the Radio Announcer of the Year award for the 2016 Rhythm of Gospel Awards.

"I was the first black announcer playing music for the diversity of students on campus. WGCS was a great experience and helped me fulfill my dream. I advise those to love what you do, be happy at it. Study the field and envision your talents. Keep the faith and stay encouraged."

Carl Haarer '79

Boston

Carl is a general assignment reporter for WBZ Radio in Boston and winner of Edward R. Murrow Awards for writing, feature reporting and breaking news, and was named "Best Radio Reporter" by Boston Magazine in 1997. He has interviewed notable people such as Mother Teresa and Bill Clinton. Here he is pictured reporting on Super Bowl 50 last year.

"My experience at Goshen College helped to broaden my perspective and give me a foundation from which I could face the varied and bizarre realities that I confront in my job. And the English Department helped me learn how to write."

Kim Macon '80

Elkhart, Indiana

Kim is the development director at 88.1 WVPE, Michiana's National Public Radio affiliate. There, she oversees all of the fundraising activities, including membership services, corporate support and events.

"I started as a copywriter for a local AM radio station, which led to radio sales and then to public radio. After several job titles here at WVPE, development director has been an excellent fit. [In college], I didn't really have much interaction with the campus radio station, but focused more on interpersonal communication. That has been instrumental in my day-to-day duties."

Lynnette Carlino '97

Dayton, Ohio

Lynnette is an EMMY™ Award-winning series producer for The Art Show on THINKTV, a PBS affiliate. After working for a CBS affiliate for 14 years, she launched the half hour magazine-style show, creating the program from the ground up.

"Because I worked on GC Journal (the campus news program at the time),

I left GC knowing all the facets of TV production, so I was able to take whatever job I could get, just to get my foot in the door."

Zach Miller '08

South Bend, Indiana

Zach is a production director for Federated Media, where he manages commercials that air on five radio stations, as well as other online media.

"My experience at 91.1 The Globe, both on-air and as student station manager, prepared me for the radio world. I was lucky enough to work under Jason Samuel (who is a fantastic teacher/mentor/friend/radio-guru), and he gave me the opportunities I needed to succeed in my radio career."

Doug Hallman '10

Lancaster, Pennsylvania

Doug tours with acts such as Trans-Siberian Orchestra, Enrique Iglesias and Pitbull as a technical engineer. His job consists of all the behind-the-scenes technical pieces, such as running the cameras, lighting, video screens and even automation. He is currently on tour with 2Cellos.

"There are many different aspects of my education that I use on a daily basis, many of which were learned in the extracurricular activities that I was involved in. In particular, because of how small the college is, I was able to get my hands dirty working behind the scenes from day one. These experiences forced me to think outside the box, and prepared me to do what I do today."

Daniel Penner '12

Seattle

Daniel is an associate video producer at Grist.org, an environmental news site, where he produces videos for their "explainers," a small team that creates videos, graphics and articles that give people the nuts and bolts of different topics.

"A lot of the skills that allowed me to get this position were from the experience I gained from FiveCore Media. During my time there, I was exposed to a professional system and process, and it gave me the confidence and knowledge that was necessary to succeed."

Katelyn Yoder '12

Los Angeles

Kate is a production secretary, supporting the producer on various film sets including with Marvel TV and Sony. At the center of the filming hub, she helps coordinate the logistics behind the production, such as hiring a helicopter for filming and making sure the actors have their scripts.

"Goshen College helped me break into the TV/film industry in several ways. FiveCore Media gave me my first job out of college and gave me invaluable experience with video production, working with clients, office procedures and general management skills. [I was able to be] part of a small film shooting in Goshen called Sand Castles. From there I met assistant directors who gave me work on set when I moved out to Los Angeles. It all snowballed from there. If I didn't work at FiveCore Media, I most likely wouldn't be where I am today."

Benjamin Kelley '13

Springdale, Arkansas

Benjamin is the radio voice of the Northwest Arkansas Naturals, the Double-A affiliate of the Kansas City Royals. He provides solo play-by-play, interviews and recaps for all 140 regular season games and travels with the team, doubling as the baseball operations coordinator.

"Attending Goshen College opened many doors for me, especially in broadcasting. The flexibility I had to pursue my two passions – baseball and radio – and then combine them post-graduation, I don't know if I could have done that anywhere else. Being able to work with all the professors who were as invested in my passion as they are in their own was an extremely rewarding experience. I felt as prepared as ever upon graduation and ready to pursue my career. Without GC, I wouldn't be where I am today."

MELISSA KINSEY,
ALUMNI AND CAREER
NETWORKS COORDINATOR

Our services do not end at graduation

Last month we welcomed a new class of seniors into the ranks of alumni as they received their diplomas from President Brenneman. This exciting rite of passage never grows old and I look forward to what it means for local and global communities as these graduates make their way with their intelligence, faith and creativity.

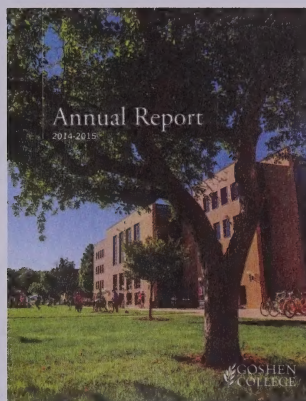

And as the coordinator of alumni and career networks, I hope that they feel prepared for the next steps they will be taking. We continue to find new ways to create opportunities for and be of service to current students and alumni, as we know that vocational pathways and discovery do not end upon college graduation.

Uniquely for students, throughout the year we meet one-on-one for career coaching, we help arrange job shadowing and internship opportunities, and we help them build strong personal and professional networks that can lead to job offers and connections. Events such as Super Tuesday offer mock interviews with local business professionals. There are first-year career plenary sessions, career workshops and senior seminars. Each event creates a building block for students throughout their college years to help them prepare for the next steps on their career path.

But we also offer services that we hope alumni find helpful. If you visit the career networks area of our website (goshen.edu/careers), you will find a variety of resources to explore vocational options ranging from graduate school to nonprofit organizations to for-profit businesses and entrepreneurship. You will also find tools to help build strong resumes, cover letters and eportfolios. And as an alumnus, if you have questions or would like some feedback, please feel free to give me a call.

Our online job bank (goshen.edu/jobs) can also be used by current students and alumni alike for both posting and seeking positions. This free resource is user-friendly and allows employers to post information about available jobs, internships or service assignments, and people looking to find the right fit for themselves.

So, whether you are a current student, a recent graduate or long-time alumnus, let us serve you too!

Annual report available online

Goshen College's 2014-15 Annual Report is available for viewing online at goshen.edu/give under "News & Reports." It is one opportunity to reflect back on the past year and say a big "thank you" to each of the individuals, churches and organizations that supported the college's students and mission this past fiscal year. Every donation matters.

Student Aid Phonathon update

Thank you for taking calls, visiting with our students and fulfilling your pledges! So far we've received $134,516 in gifts and fulfilled pledges from our fall and spring phonathons. Students are continuing to make calls, and we hope you will answer your phone and make a gift before June 30 (the end of our fiscal year) to help make college more affordable for our students. You can also give online at goshen.edu/give, or by mail: Development Office, 1700 S. Main St., Goshen, IN 46526.

A Facebook group just for your class

In preparation for Homecoming Weekend and to help classmates reconnect, we have created a Facebook group for each graduating class since 1950. In addition to catching up and conversation, you can post photos, add files, create events or conduct a poll just for members of the group. Please invite your classmates to join if they haven't already. You can find links at goshen.edu/alumni under "Stay Connected."

E-subscribe to stay connected

Stay in touch with what's happening at Goshen College from anywhere in the world. You can e-subscribe for daily GC news, Maple Leaf athletic news, upcoming event information, monthly Bulletin Points, Study-Service Term blogs and Advent/Lenten devotions at goshen.edu/subscribe.

Israeli Embassy honors Gunden Clemens

On Jan. 27, 2016, Lois Gunden Clemens '36 (1915-2005) was honored posthumously as Righteous Among the Nations at the Embassy of Israel in Washington, D.C., for her courageous work in France during World War II. Among those present at the ceremony were President Barack Obama and Steven Spielberg, and Gunden Clemens' niece Mary Jean Gunden '77 (above right, with Ginette Drwcher Kahish, one of the children helped) received the award on her behalf. The award was announced in 2013, but the ceremony was the first ever recognition of American Righteous Among the Nations to take place in the United States.

Gunden Clemens, a Goshen native, served as a French professor at the college from 1939-1941 and 1944-1958. In 1941, when she was 26 years old, she was teaching English for Mennonite Central Committee in South France when the Nazi Occupation began. She helped and rescued Jewish children and Spanish refugees from arrest. In January 1943, the Germans detained Gunden Clemens for more than a year before releasing her as part of a prisoner exchange.

Gunden Clemens is only the fourth American (of more than 24,800 people throughout the world) to have been recognized with this prestigious honor by Yad Vashem, the highest honor Israel gives non-Jews in the name of the Jewish People.

Top poets in neighboring states

Goshen College alumni are taking top poetry honors in the Midwest lately. Jeff Gundy '75 (top), an English professor at Bluffton University, was named 2015 Ohio Poet of the Year by the Ohio Poetry Day Association for his poetry collection "Somewhere Near Defiance," (Anhinga Press). In addition to a monetary prize and an honorarium as an Ohio Poetry Day speaker, a poem from his book will be included at the beginning of the Ohio Poetry Day 2015 prize poems collection, "Best of 2015." His newest work was released in September and is a book of poems entitled "Abandoned Homeland" (Bottom Dog Press, 2015).

Shari Wagner '80 (bottom), of Westfield, Indiana, began a two-year term as Indiana State Poet Laureate on Jan. 1, 2016. Born in Goshen and growing up in Wells County, she has also travelled extensively outside of Indiana, including Somalia, Kenya, Haiti and Honduras, and is especially interested in Native American history and Indiana history and folklore. Wagner teaches poetry and memoir writing at the Indiana Writers Center and literature for Butler University's Religion, Spirituality and the Arts Seminar. Her two poetry books are "The Harmonist at Nightfall: Poems of Indiana," and "Evening Chore."

From fearful to Globe Smart

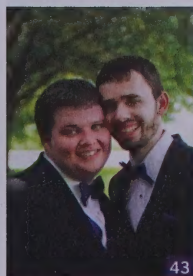

After an early career in international development in the Middle East and Africa, Anne Glick '98 (above) had a question: Using technology tools that are now available, could she find a new way to encourage kids to get out of their familiar bubbles and become "globe smart"?

So, based in the Netherlands, she started an organization called Globe Smart Kids (www.globesmartkids.org) and created educational materials (www.oneglobekids.com) and a digital app series that encourages cross-group friendship.

And Glick gives Goshen College and her Study-Service Term experience a lot of credit. "A large part of my work relates back to my experiences on SST in Ivory Coast," she said. "SST in the Ivory Coast continues to inspire my design and storytelling. I try to recreate that immersive experience of closeness and familiarity with the foreign through each One Globe Kids story."

In the spirit of "Culture for Service," Glick's received plenty of help from fellow alumni, including Hussein Ali Yusuf '04, who is serving as secretary of the Globe Smart Kids Board.

Learn more by watching Glick's TEDxEde presentation online from October 2015 in the Netherlands called "From fearful to Globe Smart."

Leading on and off the football field

Goshen College doesn't have a football team, so it's not a big surprise that GC's most famous (ok, only) professional football player doesn't fit many stereotypes.

By day, Katie Sowers '09 (above) is athletic director for Kansas City Parks and Recreation, but she also plays for the Kansas City Titans, a professional football team in the Women's Football Alliance. Not only is she the team's quarterback, but she is also their general manager.

In the 2013 International Federation of American Football (IFAF) Women's World Championships, Sowers played defensive back and was selected to the all-tournament game. In the team's semifinal match-up against Germany, she was named game MVP after she recorded five interceptions in that game, returning three for touchdowns.

Sowers – who played basketball, soccer and ran track & field during college – also has a passion for coaching. In January, she coached in the East-West Shrine Football Game in St. Petersburg, Florida, an all-star game for the best college football players in the country. She was an assistant to Charlie Weis, head coach for the Kansas Jayhawks and former head coach at Notre Dame, where she worked alongside former NFL players and coaches.

Documenting the stories of war

Mohammad Rasoulipour '13 (right) recently completed a film project with his partner, called 18 Stories of War, funded by a peacebuilding grant from The Center for Justice and Peacebuilding (CJP) at Eastern Mennonite University (EMU). The project consisted of 18 short interviews with people about their experience with war, but the depth and diversity of stories was unprecedented. The stories that came out of these questions ranged from direct experience in war-torn areas to tragic memories passed through generations, each one uniquely powerful and moving. Stories were shared from the Korean War, World War II, Guatemala and the Congo. Rasoulipour's own father was injured in the Iran-Iraq War.

The idea developed from different interactions with students in the CJP community. They realized that while they may all talk about peacebuilding, everyone has a different concept of war and that sharing those different perspectives was a way to connect these ideas. But they didn't stop there – they continued the connection through a follow-up community dialogue for people to share their own thoughts about war.

Goshen College Director of Audio-Visual Aids Jacob F. Swartzendruber works in the WGCS studio, the college's radio station, sometime after its creation in 1958.

The beginnings of a campus radio station

BY JOE SPRINGER '80, curator, Mennonite Historical Library

In the fall of 1952, Jacob F. Swartzendruber (1909-1995) bid farewell to Iowa cornfields to take on duties as the Goshen College Director of Audio-Visual Aids. Although the Iowa cadre of faculty (S.C. Yoder, C.L. Graber and Glen Miller) had failed to recruit Jake as a student in the 1920s, they identified him as someone with “a suitable personality” and invited him to help address the college’s burgeoning audio-visual needs. In addition to years of public school teaching and administration, Jake had a reputation as someone who loved to tinker with equipment.

Upon arrival, projectors, bulbs and quality content (no films that promoted “the current sensate, materialistic culture” were allowed) occupied most of his time. But as early as 1942, the college had been toying with the educational and public relations value of radio broadcasts.

Paul Bender, professor of physics, and Roy Umble '35, professor of speech, approached the development of radio from their respective academic disciplines. Jake – who had built crystal radio sets in his youth – added expertise that proved crucial to getting a radio station up and running on the campus. The Class of 1956 jumpstarted the effort by purchasing, for $1,700, a used 250-watt radio transmitter and antenna tower from Western Michigan College in Kalamazoo. By the fall of 1958, Jake had obtained the necessary license and other paperwork, installed the equipment and WGCS 91.1 FM started broadcasting two hours of programming daily. As chief engineer, Jake managed to keep most of that 1956 gift operational until his own retirement in 1975 – even as programming expanded to about 80 hours weekly.

2016 ALUMNI AWARDS

Meet the four alumni who were honored this year for living out the college's core values.

ANOTHER GENERATION

Check out this year's list of current students who have parents who are Goshen College alumni.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

We are Goshen College!

I believe with others that a sense of belonging is likely embedded in the genetic code of our souls. In fact, research has shown that a sense of belonging is, indeed, one of the most important factors in student success of any teaching and learning practice at hand. Indeed, Mother Teresa went so far as to claim something even more expansive, that the key to world peace lies in remembering that “we belong to each other.”

If that's true, and as a historic peace college, perhaps the greatest gift we can hope to give to all future graduates is the profound experience of belonging to each other, no matter our color, class, creed or culture. Together, we are Goshen College, past, present and future.

In the past year, we have also rightly witnessed claims of our common humanity as a response to the growing unrest, division and violence in our world. We have seen poignant expressions on social media, in candlelight vigils and on college campuses declaring shared pain and sorrow, of solidarity, unity and belonging.

Je suis Charlie! “I am Charlie Hebdo!” became a spirited mantra of defiant-belonging, which then became “Je suis Eric Garner, Michael Brown, Sandra Brown.” “Je suis police officers Brent Thompson and Patrick Zamarripa” — which crescendoed into “We are Charleston, Baltimore, Orlando! We are Paris! We are Aleppo!”

It is that sense of solidarity, belonging, that we want to be our last word on who we are as humans and as members of the GC community: “We are the world. We are Goshen College!”

The expression, “We are Goshen College,” is one of the grandest of all expressions of belonging that can be claimed by every current GCer. But it also stretches back 122 years to our founders, and includes every student, graduate, parent of every graduate, alumnus, donor, faculty, staff member and administrator, and all of those countless GCers still to come. And it includes those who have been blessed by, loved by, served by GCers across time and space.

For me personally, “We are Goshen College” includes the 15 presidents who have come before me and the many presidents still to come. As I begin to prepare to depart from this role next June, I want to express how deeply honored and eternally grateful I have been to serve these 11 years as president of Goshen College and alongside such dedicated employees, a committed board of directors, generous donors, loyal alumni and supportive church and community leaders. No words adequately describe the immense blessing I have also received every single day from our creative, smart and faith-inspiring students.

“Je suis Goshen College.” I am Goshen College. But more important, together, “We are Goshen College!”

About the Cover

For this issue of the Bulletin, we talked with a number of alumni who are leaders in their technological fields. Armed with their liberal arts degrees, these alums are solving problems with technology in new and colorful ways by building connections, asking good questions, generating brilliant ideas and approaching situations with creativity and commitments to justice. Like our own goshen.edu web designer/developer Micah Miller-Eshleman '14 (hand shown), who was a physics major, these alums are humanizing the tech world.

* You may notice that we are skipping from last year's volume 99 to volume 114 for 2016-17. We are doing this as a corrective measure. Volume numbering of the Bulletin has sometimes been erratic during the years since Vol. 1. No. 1 of the Bulletin appeared in May 1904. Had it been consistent, we might have called 2002-03 our 100th volume.

FIND MENNO

Menno Simons has Maple Leaf pride! We heard from 62 of you who correctly found Menno in the Spring/Summer 2016 issue on page 11, cheering on the women's basketball team during the NAIA National Tournament.

From the correct submissions, we chose at random five lucky winners to receive limited edition Goshen College T-shirts:

1. Ronald Berta '96
Middlebury, Indiana
2. Donna Eigsti '73
Hesston, Kansas
3. Nel Koop
State College, Pennsylvania
4. Anna Seney '11
Winona Lake, Indiana
5. Cheryl (Troyer) Zehr '80
Elkhart, Indiana

We love hearing from all of you as you find where Menno is hiding (he looks just like the photo at the top, just smaller). So, when you do, submit your entry to gcbulletin@goshen.edu by January 15, 2017, for a chance to win. Be sure to include your name, address, T-shirt size and graduation year/affiliation with Goshen College.

Enrollment, retention and diversity continue to rise

Enrollment at GC continued to grow this fall with a total of 870 students, an increase of nearly four percent overall. The incoming first-year class is the largest since 2009 and nearly six percent larger than last year's class.

Retention — a key measure of student satisfaction — has risen to 82 percent of last year's new students returning, an increase from 78 percent in 2015-16.

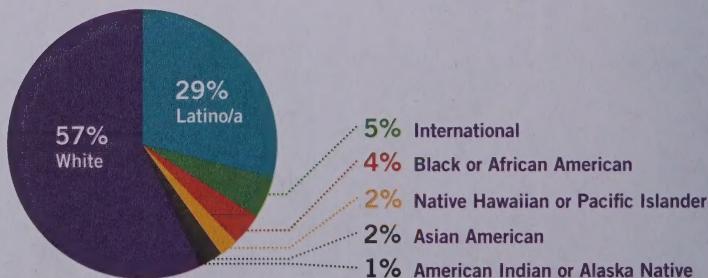

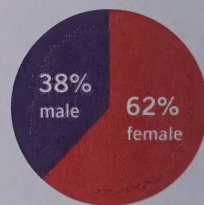

The diversity of the student body also continues to increase. Overall, 35 percent are students of color, compared to 33 percent last year.

GC experiences 10-year high for overall giving

Goshen College continues an upward trend in giving, with donors contributing a total of $9,071,399 to Goshen College — a 10-year high — including $1,831,888 to the GC Fund, during the 2015-16 fiscal year.

Former student and lifetime supporter leaves final large gift to the college: $3M

Milo Albrecht of Morton, Illinois, a former Goshen College student, farmer and charitable donor to the college, died Tuesday, April 19, 2016, at the age of 94. Though he only attended Goshen College for three semesters in 1939-40, he gave generously to the college, including a $1.98 million gift in November 2014. Following Albrecht's recent death, another $3 million worth of his Illinois farmland was given to the college through an estate gift. The money from the estate will be put toward scholarships primarily for nursing students.

Broken Shield gets a facelift

The iconic Broken Shield sculpture, created by Associate Professor of Art John Mishler '72 (right), has stood in the center of campus for 35 years as a testament to Isaiah 2:4 and Micah 4:3, imagining a day when all instruments of warfare will be broken for good.

This summer, the sculpture was removed, sandblasted and repainted. The paint and labor was donated by Greg Smucker '82, with help from Ron Miller '75 and JD Smucker '83.

"I can think of no better iconic symbol than the 'Broken Shield' to represent the choice we have made as a college," said President Jim Brenneman '77. "And to have it centered at the crossroads of the academic quad is just about a perfect placement. I hope it will forever be a part of the GC landscape."

John Mishler re-dedicates the Broken Shield during Homecoming Weekend.

Students in Inquiry Programs lead and learn through service

Camping Inquiry Program

Tanner Engle '19, from Decatur, Indiana, served at Camp Friedenswald in Michigan.

Roxanne Gehring '19, from Manhattan, Kansas, served at Camp Mennoscah in Kansas.

Lydia Hartman-Keiser '18, from Wauwatosa, Wisconsin, served at Camp Friedenswald in Michigan.

Abbie Kaiser '17, from Elk Grove Village, Illinois, served at Menno Haven Camp in Illinois.

Skye McKinnell '19, from Salem, Oregon, served at Drift Creek Camp in Oregon.

Ministry Inquiry Program

Yari Coronado '18, from Pettisville, Ohio, served at North Goshen Mennonite in Indiana.

Emily Evans '18, from Lititz, Pennsylvania, served at College Mennonite in Indiana.

Isaiah Friesen '17, from Filley, Nebraska, served at Belmont Mennonite in Indiana.

Monica Miller '18, from Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, served at Kern Road Mennonite in Indiana.

Dona Park '17, from Abbotsford, British Columbia, served at Mt. View Mennonite in California.

Eli Studebaker '18, from Goshen, served at Hyattsville Mennonite in Maryland.

Service Inquiry Program

Alma Carillo Flores '17, from Mexico City, Mexico, served with DOOR Chicago in Illinois.

Joelle Friesen '17, from Normal, Illinois, served at the Immanuel Health Center in Illinois.

Helena Neufeld '17, from Lititz, Pennsylvania, served at the Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society in Pennsylvania.

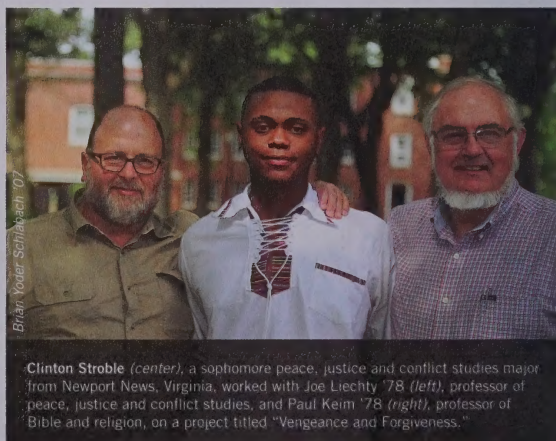

Peter Paetkau '17, from Goshen, served with the Hartford Catholic Worker in Connecticut.

Maple Scholars dig into range of topics

Sixteen Goshen College students participated in summer research projects through the college's Maple Scholars Program, an eight-week interdisciplinary program in which students collaborate with professors to study and complete hands-on research.

Research projects included: Game theory and fair allocation; support for formerly incarcerated citizens of Elkhart County; bystander education and sexualized violence at Goshen; voting power in the Norwegian government; stop-motion animation; reviewing GC's iPad program; models of vengeance and forgiveness; the Biblical Book of Job; a peace-based video game; global groundwater movement; a video project about the City of Goshen; digitizing the Record; and developing digital tools for the humanities.

Buildings named to honor trailblazing alumni

During Homecoming Weekend, it was announced that two campus buildings will be named to honor two of the first students of color to attend Goshen College.

The Student Apartments are being named the Octavio Romero Apartments, for Octavio Romero '52, of San Antonio, Texas, a successful chemist and one of the first Mexican citizens to study at Goshen College.

The Welcome Center is being named the Juanita Lark Welcome Center, for Juanita Lark Bell '43, the first African-American student to graduate from Goshen College. It will be dedicated in February 2017.

Perez wins two statewide awards

Gilberto Perez Jr., senior director of intercultural development & educational partnerships at Goshen College, was the recipient of two statewide awards for his work in education and advocacy for the Indiana Latino community. On Sept. 28, Perez was honored as Teacher of the Year 2016 by the Indiana Governor's office and the Indiana Latino Expo (ILE), and on Sept. 30 he was the recipient of the 2016 Chickadee Bird Award from the Indiana Undocumented Youth Alliance (IUYA).

Goshen College launches new Online RN to BSN program

President James E. Brenneman announces resignation for June 2017

In August, Dr. James E. Brenneman '77 announced that he will step down from his role as the 16th president of Goshen College (GC) at the end of the 2016-17 academic year, concluding 11½ years of service to the college.

Brenneman said he believes it's the right time for him to step aside to allow new leadership to advance Goshen College to the next level of success, building on what has been accomplished. The GC Board of Directors, in partnership with MEA, assembled a search committee to lead the process of finding Brenneman's successor.

Changes at the college over Brenneman's tenure have reflected his vision for the institution to become a "World House of Learning."

- He launched the Center for Intercultural & International Education in 2006 and three campus institutes in 2011: the Institute for the Study of Global Anabaptism, the Institute for

"While I've proclaimed, 'The world needs Goshen College,' and still believe this, I also believe now more than ever that Goshen College needs the community in which we live. We need our region, our nation and the world so that we can more truly reflect the love of Christ for the whole of God's good creation."

– President Brenneman

Ecological Regeneration and the Institute for Intercultural Leadership.

- The total percent of international and intercultural students at GC has since grown from 18 percent to 35 percent.
- Under Brenneman's direction, GC's general education program — the Goshen Core — was redesigned in 2012 to focus on intercultural, international, interdisciplinary and integrated learning.
- The college added its first master's degree programs: M.S. in Nursing (2007), M.A. in Environmental Education (2008), M.A. in Intercultural Leadership (2013) and the Collaborative MBA (2014), as well as the first fully-online degree program: the Online R.N. to B.S.N program (2016).

- Additionally, under Brenneman's leadership, despite the global financial crisis of 2007-09, contributions of nearly $70 million above tuition were raised in support of Goshen's program, most notably providing increased scholarships to make college more affordable and accessible.

SCOREBOARD SPRING 2016

BASEBALL (19-37, 11-17 CL)

The Maple Leaf baseball team qualified for the quarterfinals of the Crossroads League baseball tournament for the first time since 2005 with a seventh-place finish. The 2016 season marked the third year in a row that the team has improved its win total from the season before, with all three seasons coming under the guidance of head coach Alex Childers. Freshman outfielder Noah Shail (LaPorte, Indiana) was named to the all-conference honorable mention team after leading the team with a .358 batting average and seven stolen bases. Junior Preston Carr (St. Thomas, Ontario), who hit .289 with five steals, was another honorable mention pick. Carr also earned the league's Golden Glove Award in center field after his second straight errorless season. Sophomore pitcher Travis Grimm (Muskegon, Michigan) posted a Maple Leaf-best 4.26 earned run average and junior Michael Walker (Archbold, Ohio), left, led the team with 42 strikeouts.

SOFTBALL (6-44, 4-31 CL)

During the 2016 Goshen College softball season, Brooke Maes (Goshen), a junior outfielder, was named honorable mention all-Crossroads League: she led the team with 44 hits and her nine home runs were two shy of the school's single-season record, while she set a new school record with 23 walks. Senior Sam Langley (Tipton, Indiana) won the league's Golden Glove Award at shortstop after handling the most chances of any conference infielder other than a first baseman. Freshman Rae Ann Miller (Elkhart, Indiana), above right, racked up six wins in the pitching circle and posted 119 strikeouts, the second-most in GC history.

MEN'S TRACK AND FIELD (8TH IN CL CHAMPIONSHIPS)

A pair of Goshen athletes qualified for nationals, each in a pair of events: sophomore Sawyer Biddle (White Heath, Illinois) was an All-American in the 3,000-meter race walk at the NAIA indoor championships in March and also qualified for the outdoor meet in May, while junior Ryan Smith (Millersburg, Indiana), above left, qualified for the outdoor meet in both the 5,000 and the 10,000. Smith also set new school records in the 10,000 (30:57.24) and the 5,000 (14:54.20) and was named all-conference with his second-place finish in the 10,000. Two relay teams — the 4x100 and 4x400 — also finished in the top eight to augment the team score at the conference meet, while junior Luke Graber (Stryker, Ohio) set a new personal best as he finished ninth in the 800. Senior Christian Stevens (South Bend, Indiana) tied a school record when he finished the 60-meter dash in 7.30 seconds during the indoor season.

WOMEN'S TRACK AND FIELD (10TH IN CL CHAMPIONSHIPS)

This summer a new entrance gate to the John Ingold Athletic Complex was completed, evoking the Eighth Street Gate, along with a new pathway connecting the parking lots with the soccer, baseball and softball facilities, and new purple signage for all complex facilities.

NEW COACHES AND ATHLETIC TRAINER

Evan Atkinson, above left, was named director of the Maple Leaf men's and women's tennis programs in February. An Elkhart County native who graduated from Taylor University in 2008, Atkinson spent the past seven years as a tennis coach at Northridge High School. As director of tennis, he will be considered the head coach of both GC tennis teams for record-keeping purposes. Current women's head coach Doug Gossman will remain with the combined program as an assistant, while men's head coach Stan King '61 is retiring after 17 seasons.

Rustin Nyce '02, above middle, who has served as men's and women's cross country coach since the fall of 2015, was named men's and women's track and field coach in February when Jim Whittaker '06 resigned to accept a coaching position in Kansas. Previously the head boys track coach at Fairfield High School in Millersburg, Indiana, Nyce ran for Rick Clark '75 while enrolled at GC and spent three years as an assistant to Doug Yoder '77 after graduation.

Erica Albertin, above right, began her tenure as head athletic trainer in August following Linda Kaminski's retirement after 11 years at GC. Albertin is a 2009 graduate of Manchester University, where she was a two-sport athlete in basketball and soccer. She is in the process of completing a doctorate in athletic training from the University of Idaho. She comes to Goshen from Dominican University, an NCAA Division III school in Lake Forest, Illinois.

NAIA RECOGNIZES 53 SCHOLAR-ATHLETES FOR 2015-16

During the 2015-16 school year, 32 fall student-athletes, three basketball student-athletes and 18 spring student-athletes were recognized as Daktronics-NAIA Scholar-Athletes, for a total of 53. This is six percent more than the prior year. This year's total represents one out of every five athletes on a Maple Leaf varsity roster, a figure that is made even more impressive by the fact that only juniors and seniors are eligible.

“My consuming passion as an editor is to work with new writers who are establishing their literary voice.”

CULTURE FOR SERVICE AWARD

Ellah Wakatama Allfrey '88

London, England | communication major

An internationally-known author, broadcaster, editor and literary critic, Ellah Wakatama Allfrey '88 grew up in Zimbabwe and now lives in England. She has become renowned especially for her work in Anglophone African literature.

Allfrey is former deputy editor of Granta magazine and editor-at-large for Granta and Portobello Books. She has previously served as an editor for Jonathan Cape/Random House and Penguin Press. She currently sits on the selection panel for the Rockefeller Foundation's Bellagio Fellowship and as a judge for the 2016 Dublin International Literary Award. Allfrey has served as a judge for prestigious literary awards such as the Man Booker Prize, the David Cohen Prize, the Commonwealth Writers' Prize, and the Caine Prize for African Writing.

In recognition of her significant contributions to the publishing industry, Allfrey was awarded the title of Officer of the Order of the British Empire (OBE) by Prince Charles in 2011, which is one of the highest cultural honors in England.

“Ellah's work is marked by her intelligence, honesty and integrity,” said Jonathan Taylor CBE, chair of the Booker Prize Foundation and of the Caine Prize for African Writing. “Her work has a strong international focus and interest, particularly in relation to Africa where she is closely involved in the recognition and reward of creative literary talent and with the development of relevant skills.”

Allfrey earned a master's degree in communication and information studies from Rutgers University and her work in journalism has appeared in publications including the Independent, the Guardian, the Telegraph and the Observer, and she has contributed to NPR's book pages and “All Things Considered.”

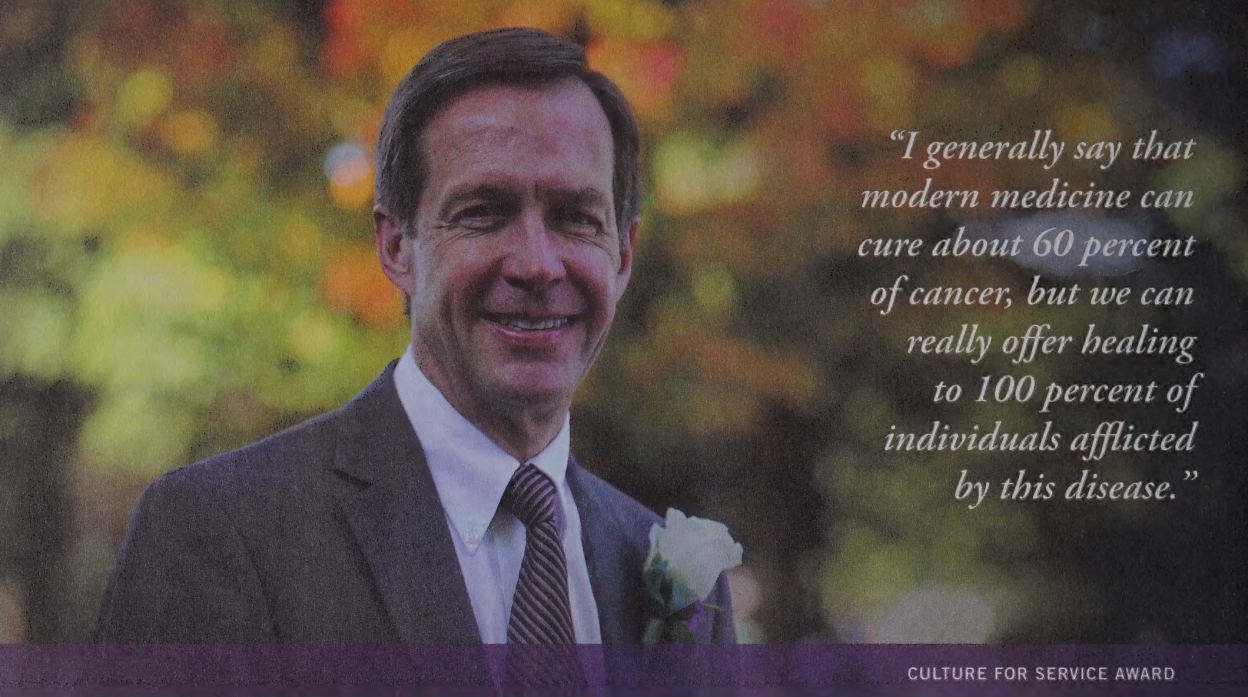

In 2014, Allfrey edited the anthology “Africa39: New Writing from Africa South of the Sahara,” a project which selected 39 Sub-Saharan African writers under the age of 40 who were deemed the most promising in the development of new literature. This May, Allfrey edited another collection of creative nonfiction by African writers called “Safe House: Explorations in Creative Nonfiction.”

Allfrey returned to her alma mater this fall to teach two guest courses — one on contemporary African literature and another on editing and publishing — through a pilot program called the Global Intercultural Scholar Program. She also presented the 2016 SA Yoder Lecture on campus in October.

In an essay written for the Journal for the Center of Mennonite Writing in 2012, Allfrey wrote, “I cannot say that Goshen changed me profoundly — but what it did provide is perhaps more valuable. There I found the space, the safety and the acceptance to become myself, and there I found the challenge to make that self one whose life would have meaning.”

Allfrey lives in London with her husband, Richard Allfrey '87, and daughter Gabrielle.

"I generally say that modern medicine can cure about 60 percent of cancer, but we can really offer healing to 100 percent of individuals afflicted by this disease."

Dr. Doug Schwartzentruber '78

Indianapolis, Indiana | natural science major

Doug Schwartzentruber '78, a surgical oncologist and the system medical director for Indiana University Health's statewide cancer services in Indianapolis, was named one of TIME Magazine's 100 most influential people in the world in 2010.

Schwartzentruber is best known for his groundbreaking research concerning the role of vaccines in the treatment of skin cancer.

The New England Journal of Medicine published Schwartzentruber's clinical trial, which was the first to show that a vaccine can assist the immune system in combating melanoma and shrinking existing tumors. A prolific author and researcher, he has published 12 book chapters and more than 80 scholarly articles in peer-reviewed journals.

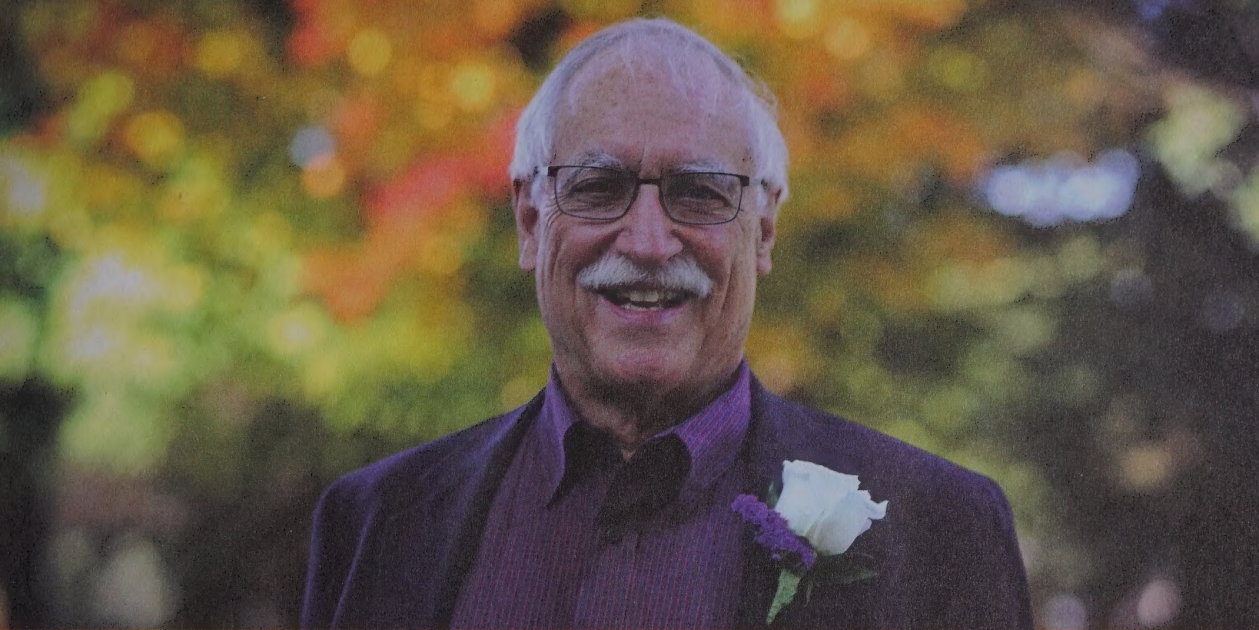

Aside from his scientific successes, Schwartzentruber has a reputation for collaboration with colleagues and is known for his patient-centered approach to care. His goal is to create a cancer care program that takes care of the whole patient rather than focusing solely on the disease.

Schwartzentruber's parents were missionaries in Argentina with the Mennonite church, and he lived and attended school there until he was 16 years old. The family then moved to the United States in 1973 when local pastors took over leadership of the church.

"The community I grew up in was about the size of Goshen, and there was only one other American family in that city," he said. "It was a total immersion into that culture."

He completed his bachelor's degree at Goshen College in 1978, attended medical school at Indiana University School of Medicine and completed a general surgery residency there from 1982-87. He then completed an immunotherapy fellowship in 1988 and a surgical oncology fellowship in 1990 at the National Cancer Institute. After working there for 13 years, he served as medical director for the IU Health Goshen Center for Cancer Care until 2011.

Schwartzentruber attends First Mennonite Church in Indianapolis. He and his wife, Diane White, have two children: Alicia '11 and Jared.

DR. ROMAN GINGERICH CHAMPION OF CHARACTER AWARD

James Gingerich '66

Albuquerque, New Mexico | physical education major

James (Jim) L. Gingerich '66, of Albuquerque, New Mexico, has a diverse resume — among his many accomplishments, he played four years of basketball and baseball at Goshen College, served in agricultural economic development for 34 years in six countries and climbed Mount Kilimanjaro and Mount Kenya.

Gingerich competed under the guidance of two well-known GC athletics figures, baseball coach Harold “Sarge” Yoder '50 and basketball coach Roman

Gingerich '41 — Jim's father (who this award is named after). He starred on the basketball and baseball teams, and broke the basketball team's career scoring record, averaged 19 points a game while making 60 percent of his shots and was second on the team for assists his senior year.

After college, Gingerich began his long international career with International Voluntary Service in Laos and Bangladesh. He received master's degrees in agricultural economics from Ohio State University and applied economics from Stanford University, and then joined USAID, the United States' civilian foreign aid agency, and served with them in Pakistan, Indonesia, Kenya and Nepal.

One of his greatest accomplishments was that as a long-term team leader for an Indonesian food policy support program, they contributed to keeping the price of Indonesian rice within 10 percent of world rice prices during a particularly turbulent political period. He later worked for a private consulting firm that was often involved with USAID and the World Bank.

Gingerich has also been involved in agriculture more directly as a former co-owner and current board member for Shenandoah Growers, Inc. based in Harrisonburg, Virginia, which recently became the largest, fresh, culinary herb company in the country.

Gingerich currently attends Albuquerque Mennonite Church and is one of the leaders of the Mennonite Disaster Service unit in New Mexico. His wife Molly died in 2011 and their son Christopher graduated from Goshen College in 2005.

DR. RUTH GUNDEN CHAMPION OF CHARACTER AWARD

Aletha Stahl '89

Richmond, Indiana | French and English double major

Aletha Stahl '89 is a professor of French and francophone studies at Earlham College in Richmond, Indiana, as well as a registered yoga instructor and former Goshen College award-winning runner.

Stahl was a founding member of GC's first full-season women's cross country team, and her prowess played a large role in growing the program. She was a two-time NAIA All-American Scholar-Athlete and GC's first national qualifier in both women's cross country and track and field, and remained undefeated among runners from NAIA District 21 during her senior year, winning the conference and district championship.

After graduating from Goshen College in 1989 with bachelor's degrees in English and French, Stahl went on to complete her master's degree and doctorate at the University of Iowa.

Now a professor at Earlham College, Stahl brings a sensibility for social justice to the study of translation, creole languages, literature and film. Her current academic focus is on the way that virtual worlds and simulations may enhance education. Stahl writes on her website, "I am passionate about language and am particularly fascinated by the relationship between language and social justice."

She has continued in her love for physical activity by becoming a registered yoga teacher. After long pondering how language learning connects with the contemplative and physical aspects of yoga, she developed a special basic French course, pairing classroom French instruction with yoga classes in French.

In her free time, Stahl volunteers on a committee for three Quaker Meetings that offers a youth group for local young people. She lives in Richmond, Indiana, with her husband Neal Baker and their son Luc.

humanizing A TECH WORLD

Young alumni are coding, strategizing and analyzing streams of data in the expansive technology field.

EDITED BY JODI H. BEYELER '00

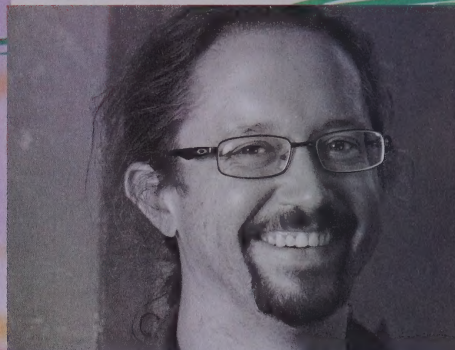

When you think of people in the tech industry, liberal arts majors may not be the first demographic that comes to mind. But Goshen College alumni who work in the tech industry have found that their liberal arts backgrounds are serving them quite well indeed.

Fundamentally, technology is a tool for solving problems, like: How can we help teachers communicate better with their students' parents? How can we help diabetics more easily monitor their glucose levels? How can we help people searching online more easily find exactly what they need?

From Washington D.C. to Silicon Valley, our alums are helping answer those questions — and so many more — at companies they founded, at some of the biggest names in the industry and everywhere in between. And as you can imagine for liberal arts alumni, while some learned their tech skills in college in one of our strong technology-related majors — computer science, informatics or information technology — others were theater, physics, history, Bible and religion, and English majors. They give credit to their experience with The Record, Maple Scholars, mainstage plays, Study-Service Term and internship opportunities.

Because they learned in college how to be critical thinkers, how to write, how to create, how to solve problems, how to lead, how to care about social justice, they are now able to help bring a human touch to a binary world. (And as you'll see, some of them have found that the best employees or co-workers are fellow Goshen College alumni because of this!)

Here are just a few of them that we want you to meet.

Bryan Falcon '95

Tucson, Arizona | theater major

Vice president of product strategy for PowerSchool, an online portal for student information that serves over one-third of all North American K-12 students. Bryan helped found Haiku Learning in 2006, which was acquired this year by PowerSchool. Fellow alumni who work at PowerSchool now are: Allen Angell '89, Reynard Hilman '01, Rachel Beyeler '02, Elizabeth Falcón '02, Renee Springer '03, Marcos Wright-Kuhns '06, Annie Martens '12, Anna Ruth '12, Si Gustafson-Zook '13 and Andrew Shenk '13.

How did your Goshen College education prepare you for what you are doing?

"Goshen College imbued in me a strong appreciation for how education can level the socioeconomic playing field for those who otherwise would lack opportunity. There is no role more important to our society, and to our planet, than that of the educator."

What is a piece of advice you would give to a Goshen College student who is interested in heading into your field?

"Embrace the arts and literature. Refine your critical thinking. Learn to write. If you can meld a creative spirit with strong communication and technical skills, then new horizons will open to you."

"My job is to talk to teachers, administrators, students and parents to determine the root problems in education that we, as a technology company, can help solve."

– Bryan Falcon '95

Nate Pletcher '00

Mountain View, California |
physics major

Hardware engineer at Verily Life Sciences (formerly Google Life Sciences). Nate designs integrated circuit chips and electronics for medical devices, such as continuous glucose monitors for people with diabetes.

How did your Goshen College education prepare you for what you are doing?

"I had the opportunity to be involved in research activity early on at Goshen College, which gave me a good start on my future engineering career. A liberal arts background has also been valuable in the multi-disciplinary field of medical devices."

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

"I like working with new technology, and developing devices that can help people to better manage their health."

Gaurav Khandelwal '01

Houston, Texas | computer science and business information systems double major

Founder and CEO of ChaiOne, a software development company that builds and designs mobile solutions for businesses. Gaurav received Houston's "40 under 40 Award" in 2009.

How did your Goshen College education prepare you for what you are doing?

"I took a class in my first year that was a business simulation where we had to build a business through ups and downs of an economic cycle. It wasn't so much what that class taught me, but the environment that it created for me to find what I was really good at."

What is a piece of advice you would give to a Goshen College student who is interested in heading into your field?

"Learn how to code. Take the Econ 101 class and understand supply and demand. Finally take an accounting class and understand the profit and loss statement. Take all this and run a business, any business, doesn't matter how big or small. Practice makes you perfect."

Carl Meyer '01

major was undecided

Software engineer at Instagram and co-owner of OddBird, a web application development consultancy, with siblings Jonny Gerig Meyer '08 and Miriam Suzanne '05. OddBird also employs Sondra Eisenstat '06 and David Glick '07.

What is a piece of advice you would give to a Goshen College student who is interested in heading into your field?

"Get involved in open source software."

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

"Learning new things every day and helping to build a product that so many people enjoy."

Becca Stucky '06

physics major | director of demand generation and programs

Jacob Stucky '06

business information systems and computer science double major | director of software development

Ben Yoder '07

computer science major | product manager

Arienne Johnson McShane '10

history and Bible and religion double major | sales development representative

Washington, D.C. | Thycotic, a cybersecurity software company

How did your Goshen College education prepare you for what you are doing?

Becca: "Surprisingly, it's [my physics major] and my time on The Record, along with project management experience I picked up after Goshen, that allows me to be successful today."

Jacob: "My business degree helped me to think critically about what businesses need, and be able to explain concepts in the terms of problems and solutions instead of technical code speak. The absolute most important part of my GC education though was my internship."

What gives you the most satisfaction in your work?

Ben: "I'm happy any day I can help someone solve a tricky problem, or work with a customer to help them get the most out of our software."

Arienne: "The most enjoyable aspect of this job for me is the amount of learning I am able to do here. The tech industry expands outward for seemingly forever, and I am a nerd for putting new pieces of that puzzle together."

Ben Jacobs '09

Aptos, California | English major | senior software engineer at Netflix

How did your Goshen College education prepare you for what you are doing?

"One of the beauties of GC is that professors are willing to give students the time and attention they need to explore. As a self-taught software engineer, I rely on the research habits I learned at GC to master new skills."

What is a piece of advice you would give to a Goshen College student who is interested in heading into your field?

"Move quickly and don't stop pushing yourself. That sounds like a Silicon Valley cliché, but I've found it to be true. During my six years as a professional software developer, I've worked in three full-time jobs, done numerous contract jobs and contributed to some open source projects. All of these have taught me different elements about the business. Software development is daunting at first because there are so many opportunities and different technologies. Don't be afraid to dive in and learn as you go."

Melissa MacGregor '09

San Francisco, California | history and investigative skills major | senior analyst at Yahoo, digging into behavioral analytics

How did your Goshen College education prepare you for what you are doing?

"I credit my education at GC with cultivating strong critical thinking; an ability to synthesize and distill a point of view from messy, imperfect data sources; a deep curiosity in research methodologies; and the values to prioritize dignity and compassion in the work I do, with whom I collaborate with and to whom my research may impact."

What is a piece of advice you would give to a Goshen College student who is interested in heading into your field?

"Learn to communicate clearly. Flex that muscle as much as you can in college. Technical chops are, of course, important — but clearly communicating will amplify your work and its impact."

"My work ranges from calculating long-term value to giving guidance on what Tumblr GIF to promote on Valentine's Day to providing insight on breaking news spikes. My work can swing from the very granular and the very technical to a 30,000 foot view at a moment's notice — and I love it."

DAN KOOP LIECHTY '88,
DIRECTOR OF ALUMNI AND CAREER NETWORKS

Join the team!

In my role, one of my top priorities is working with the Goshen College Alumni Board, full of energetic graduates who are passionate in their devotion for and support of the college.

Led by Chair Dan Coyne '80, board members have been very eager to help us with one of our top goals as a college of growing our enrollment, for which we are so grateful. Coming from an enrollment background myself and with those in enrollment well aware of the impact that a strong alumni group can have on their work, we are responding by testing a new program this year.

This fall, board members are going to pilot "Alumni Recruitment Kits" that they can use to help with discussions with prospective students in their home areas and beyond. These kits, which the Admissions Office has developed specifically for this purpose, will include materials that can help tell the Goshen College story to prospective students. It is our hope that after a successful trial that we will make these kits available more broadly to any alumni or friend of the college who would like to reach out to potential students in their lives or communities.

Another important task for the board is the selection of our annual Culture for Service and Young Alumni Servant Leadership Awards. These awards are presented at Homecoming, but the nomination process is perpetually ongoing. It is driven by alumni and friends of the college who let us know who they think have most lived the core values of Goshen College at the beginning of and throughout their vocational lives. We are again asking you to nominate an alumnus for these awards (more information is to the right or can be found on goshen.edu/alumni).

While there are many things to juggle when working with alumni and career networks, connecting with energetic, supportive alumni is always a top joy. The Goshen College Alumni Board is just such a group. Perhaps you would like to join us? If so, drop me a note.

Nominate fellow alumni for the 2017 alumni awards

Do you have classmates or alumni friends who exemplify the college's motto, "Culture for Service," live out the college's core values and should be considered for the 2017 Goshen College alumni awards? Find the criteria and submit your nominations to the Alumni Association by Jan. 16, 2017 at goshen.edu/alumniawards. Applications are accepted on an on-going basis and those completed after the deadline will be considered for the following year.

What's your class year?

Did you know that you can choose what class year you most identify with, even if it isn't the year you officially graduated? Though we can't change your grad year on your transcript, the Alumni Office will happily make that change in the database so that you will get information about your preferred reunion year and be identified as you wish. Just email alumni@goshen.edu or call us at 574.535.7565.

Scientist and ballroom dancer wins biomedical research award

Rushika Perera '95 has become known both as the winner of a 2016 Boettcher Foundation Webb-Waring Biomedical Research Award and a world-class ballroom dancer.

A native of Sri Lanka, Perera moved to the United States to study at Goshen College in 1991. After discovering an interest in viruses during her graduate studies, Perera focused her research on mosquito-borne viruses and now runs a lab on Colorado State University's (CSU) Foothills Campus where she continues to research and teach doctoral students.

With the resources provided by the Boettcher grant, Perera hopes to discover a way to prevent the dangerous spread of viruses like dengue, malaria, West Nile and Zika from mosquitoes to humans.

Ballroom dancing has remained a way for Perera to relax, socialize and continue to teach. In a June interview with CSU, Perera said, "Dance allows me to impact people's lives through teaching and encouragement. I have realized that my years of dance has provided me with an opportunity to touch people's lives."

Abebe '07 recognized for 'transforming insurance industry'

Ashe Abebe '07 was recently featured on the cover of Independent Agent (IA) magazine as a millennial who is "transforming the insurance industry."

Currently an agent at Wenclewicz Insurance in Indianapolis, Abebe recounted having difficulty finding a job after graduation in 2007. Later, while working at State Farm, he met Mark Wenclewicz '04, an independent agent and fellow alum, who eventually convinced Abebe to work for him.

In the interview with IA, Abebe said that a stereotype of millennials that fits him is flexibility and willingness to adapt to change.

"It's not always the most popular thing to do, but in the long term, if it's going to make us quicker and better at our jobs, we're going to find a way to make it more functional," he said.

Abebe explained that motivation comes from setting high standards.

"It's about trying to raise the bar on a daily basis," he said. "How can we make the process better? How can we make it easier for our clients? How can we amaze them each and every day?"

Six alumni serving on new song collection selection committee

Six Goshen College alumni are serving on a 13-person committee to develop a new Mennonite song collection planned for release in 2020: Bradley Kauffman '96 (project director), Amy Gingerich '99, Katie Graber '99, Adam Tice '02 (text editor), SaeJin Lee '11 and Emily Grimes '14.

The project is run by MennoMedia, the publishing house for the Mennonite church, and is in consultation with Mennonite Church USA and Mennonite Church Canada.

The new collection will replace "Hymnal: A Worship Book" (1992), "Sing the Journey" (2005) and "Sing the Story" (2007), the previous song resources.

According to MennoMedia, the collection will "take into account the breadth of the Mennonite Church, the diverse ways Mennonites sing and worship, and new digital technologies." A dedicated fundraising website for the new song collection has been launched at HymnalProject606.com.

Kheshgi '04 takes the stage for ethnomusicology research

Rehanna Kheshgi '04 turned a lifelong love of Indian music into an international career in ethnomusicology, and became a pop music star in the process.

After graduating from Goshen College with a degree in music performance, Kheshgi received a Fulbright student research grant to study Hindustani classical music performance training and research at the University of New Delhi. She then returned to school to receive her master's degree and received her doctorate in June from the University of Chicago. She is teaching at Yale University as a postdoctoral fellow at the Institute of Sacred Music during 2016-17.

In 2015, Kheshgi went to Assam, a northeastern state in India, to research and perform Bihu music and dance with Angaraang "Papon" Mahanta — one of Assam's most famous artists — and his band.

The large amount of publicity Kheshgi received during the tour with Mahanta followed her back to the United States, and she was invited to sing with Assamese pop stars at the Assam Association of North America's convention in Las Vegas in 2015.

When medicinal whiskey met Indiana state politics

by JOE SPRINGER '80, curator, Mennonite Historical Library

(Top) Nancy Kulp Gilliom 1904 with her children, including two boys whose lives were saved by whiskey. This photo was published in nationally-syndicated newspapers in May 1927.

Newspaper Enterprise Association photos (Mennonite Historical Library collection)

In May 1927, Nancy Kulp Gilliom 1904 (for whose father — Lewis — Kulp Hall is named) came briefly into the national limelight. In a very public challenge to Indiana's recent "bone-dry" tightening of federal prohibition laws, her husband — Indiana's Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom 1910 (Academy & Oratory) — had reported in a nationally-syndicated article their use of (forbidden) medicinal alcohol to treat their seriously-ill sons, Luther and Arthur. Describing herself as a "little homebody" who had never "so much smelled a cocktail," Gilliom told reporters that "any woman's first law is to make her children live, regardless of method."

Shrewdly, Gilliom's public call to amend the law was addressed to Indiana Governor Edward Jackson, reminding Jackson that he later had asked their assistance in procuring prescription whiskey to treat his seriously-ill wife. Most Hoosier politicians of the day depended on the backing of self-pronounced protectors of "American" morality: the Indiana Anti-Saloon League (IASL) and the Ku Klux Klan. In 1924, Gilliom, who had opposed the Klan in several earlier court cases, unexpectedly rode the coattails of Klan members — such as Governor Jackson — to victory.

In his role as attorney general, Gilliom fought what he perceived as corrupting influences of the IASL and KKK. He characterized them as "super-governmental groups" who had succeeded in "making candidates of both political parties ... responsible to them ... under corrupt bargains or under the threat of massed group opposition at the polls."

Near the height of their influence in Indiana in 1924, both the IASL and KKK had suffered major internal scandals by 1928. These scandals, in part brought to light by Gilliom's actions as attorney general, vastly diminished the groups' political influence in the state.

What legacy will you leave 100 years from now?

In 1916, the graduating class wanted to leave a mark of appreciation for the college that shaped them and had this lovely stone bench created. It has provided an important and beautiful place of rest, study and connection for students, all the while bearing the memorable class motto as words of encouragement: "To the stars thru rugged ways."

Now is the time to start planning your own legacy for future Goshen College students. Planned giving offers you peace of mind and reflects your values as you are able to joyfully share your abundance for many years to come.
